

How to Find a Psychotherapist

Finding a therapist can be the first step toward learning new ways to handle difficult situations. Look for a licensed therapist.

Licensed psychotherapists include:

- Clinical Social Workers (LICSW) have a master's degree in Social Work (MSW) with at least several years of supervised experience.
- Clinical Psychologists have a Ph.D. in Psychology. They may do psychological testing in addition to psychotherapy.
- Psychiatrists are medical doctors who have had additional training in psychiatry. Psychiatrists can prescribe medication.
- Psychiatric Nurse Clinicians are nurses with master's degrees who may provide psychotherapy and prescribe medication.

Getting started:

1. Call your insurance company (see your card for contact information). Your insurance may require you to use one of their preferred providers.

5. Speak with your Employee Assistance Program (EAP). Your EAP may provide short-term counseling, help you identify any longer-term needs and refer to a therapist.
6. Ask your friends. You may find that friends or family have had therapy themselves and can make trustworthy recommendations.
